Climbing higher, one breath at a time.

Thomas L. Petty, M.D.

Moving Mountains Lung Health Conference

October 8, 2011

Have you ever dreamt of climbing a mountain peak, hiking around a lake, or strolling along a mountain stream? For people with lung disease, breathing can be hard at any altitude. Walking across the room can become more challenging than scaling a 14,000 foot mountain peak. Learning all you can about lung disease can give you a step up on climbing your mountains. Start your climb today, one breath at a time!

Join us at this year's COPD Conference
